

Quantity is fun, Quality is key

Maybe doing one of those is okay, this is definitely too much.

Highest Pull Request Count Repos

4201	Hacktoberfest-2018/Hello-world
2118	firstcontributions/first-contributions
1779	lingonsaft/hacktoberfest
1327	AliceWonderland/hacktoberfest
1125	Showndarya/Hacktoberfest
1073	ambujraj/hacktoberfest2018
1064	freeCodeCamp/guide
985	Cutwell/Hacktoberfest-Census
971	kvaluruk/Data-Structures-And-Algorithms-Hacktoberfest18
962	freeCodeCamp/freeCodeCamp
819	my-first-pr/hacktoberfest-2018
696	jsonmc/jsonmc
671	rishabh-bansal/Make-a-Pull-Request
588	ZoranPandovski/al-go-rithms
518	Nguyen17/Hacktoberfest-Sign-In
511	Omkar-Ajnadkar/Hello-World
471	abhilashk433/Hacktoberfest-2018
456	IODevelopers/hacktoberfest
420	RaidAndFade/Hacktoberfest2018
414	matthewsamuel95/ACM-ICPC-Algorithms

View More on GitHub

What you should NOT do

Make sure you are NOT messing around. They can tag your pull request as invalid and then it won't count. That includes:

- automated e.g. scripted opening PRs to remove whitespace / optimize images.
- disruptive e.g. taking someone else's branch/commits and making a PR.
- hindrance, i.e. not helping.
- Something that's clearly an attempt to simply +1 your PR count for October.